history

James H. Cummings Foundation, Inc. is a charitable, not-for-profit corporation organized in New York State in July 1962 for the purpose of complying with certain directions in the will of its founder and namesake.

James H. Cummings was a resident of Buffalo, New York where he owned and operated a pharmaceutical business, American Ferment Company. Routinely spending 14-hour days working at his desk or in the laboratory, Cummings built the company's success around a group of proprietary medicines which carried the trade name, "Caroid."

With offices and plants in both Buffalo and Toronto, Canada, Mr. Cummings grew strong ties to both cities, but he was just as much at home raising cattle on a farm he owned near Hendersonville, North Carolina.

Admired for his unassuming manner, friendly air, and a quiet generosity, he is remembered as a down-to-earth man whose keen interest in medicine inspired those who knew him to call him "Dr. Cummings."

After selling the pharmaceutical business in 1938, Cummings made it a priority to give back to the communities with which he had grown connected, funding hospital and church construction projects, among other philanthropic undertakings.

After his death in 1959, James H. Cummings Foundation was established to carry out the wishes outlined in Mr. Cummings will, continuing the support for charitable interests he had served during his life.
